

NEW FACULTY MENTORING GRANT PROGRAM

There are two opportunities to submit your proposal: December 1, 2022 and March 1, 2023.

The Office of the Executive Vice President and Provost and the deans support and fund a mentoring program for eligible new faculty members. Each faculty member is eligible to receive up to $1,500 to implement a project of their own design that engages at least one mentor, external to Virginia Tech, in helping them advance their academic and professional career.

Virginia Tech supports a “mentoring network” approach, in which faculty members form relationships with multiple mentors, including faculty inside and outside their departments as well as faculty members from other institutions. Mentoring relationships are professional in nature and are sustained over time to further advance the faculty member’s career. This program is meant to complement, not replace, the mentoring support faculty receive within their department and/or college.

Newly appointed clinical assistant professors, assistant professors of practice, collegiate assistant professors, University Libraries professional assistant professors, and tenure-track assistant professors are invited to design and submit a proposal for their mentoring project early in their residency at Virginia Tech. Specifically, proposals must be submitted electronically within the first year of their appointment. For faculty members in veterinary medicine, the proposal must be submitted within the first two years of their appointment.

The project should represent a career development opportunity that may otherwise not be possible without this funding. For the purposes of this program, mentoring includes a wide variety of career development experiences. To assist in the development of their mentoring projects, new faculty members will be invited to a mentoring grant workshop conducted by the provost’s office. The workshop will allow participants to learn more about mentoring at Virginia Tech, to learn about the mentoring grant application process, to hear from previous mentoring grant recipients and department heads about mentoring, and to discuss ideas for mentoring projects and get questions answered. New faculty members and department heads may also consult at any time with Rachel Gabriele, Assistant Provost, in the provost’s office (rachelvg@vt.edu).

To guide in the development of the mentoring project proposal, below are examples of previously supported mentoring activities:

- Off-campus meetings to visit a potential mentor to learn or discuss a new research or teaching method;
- Travel expenses to co-present with a mentor (or mentors), and/or meet potential mentors at a professional conference;
- Modest honoraria to bring a recognized scholar and/or teacher in your field (as a potential mentor) to Virginia Tech for a departmental or interdisciplinary event, such as a seminar or workshop.

Funds may not be used for salary, hardware, software, equipment, and/or capital improvements. All expenditures must be in accordance with Virginia Tech policies and procedures. Mentoring project proposals should use the appropriate form, be submitted electronically, and include:

- Clear description of the proposed activities, including timeframe and budget;
- Specific goals for the proposed activities;
- Explanation of how the project goals support the faculty member’s career development.

Four semesters after completion of the mentoring activities, faculty members will be asked to submit electronically a brief report on the success of the mentoring project. In addition, the faculty member may be asked to participate in a workshop or an evaluation activity to improve the program.
