

ACC Academic Leaders Network

Participant Selection Information

This program is geared to advance inter-institutional networking and collaboration as well as to provide a context for participants to further develop their own leadership, identify and leverage leadership strengths in others, and develop and cultivate future leaders.

We invite you to select Department Chairs or Heads, Assistant or Associate Deans, Assistant or Associate Provosts (or similar titles as they may vary from institution to institution) with at least 1-2 years of experience in their current role for participation.

Selecting Your Participants

You may use whatever selection process makes sense for your institution. Some universities may use a nomination and selection process, while others may confer with their provost and deans to select and invite participants more directly.

The ACC Academic Consortium will fund the participation of 5 participants from each participating university (all program costs, meals, and lodging for each session). Your university will need to cover each participant's travel expenses to and from each session. Participants must be able to commit to attending all three on-site sessions.

The "role mix" of participants is up to each university. We encourage you to keep in mind the diversity of your participants. The program aims to build a diverse full cohort, but also diverse and robust local cohorts. We encourage you to think about your participants also in terms of their potential benefit in networking with and learning from each other – not only at the onsite sessions, but in your own university over their participation year and beyond.
